A SAD CASE.

A Sewickley Druggist Falls From the Wharfboat Here

AT AN EARLY HOUR YESTERDAY

And Was Drowned-Was a Passenger on the Steamer Keystone State, and Had Gone Un-Town-On His Return He Wandered to the Stern of the Wharfboat and Tumbled Into the River-Body Not Recovered.

A very sad accedent occurred yester day morning at 5 o'clock at the wharfboat, in which a Sewickley (Pa.) man lost his life. As in so many other trag-edies, strong drink was the direct cause of the man's violent death.

P. C. Marshall was a druggist at Sewickley, a suburb of Pittsburgh. He had taken passage on the Keystone State at Pittsburgh Monday night, intending to make the trip to Cincinnatiand return, On board the boat he became acquainted with another passenger, E. G. Robinson, also of Pittsburgh. On the arrival of the Keystone State here at 4:39 a. m. Marshall and Rooingson went up the wharf to a saloon on Water street. Previous to this they had been drinking. In a short time they returned to the wharfboat, intending to board the Keystone State again. In the darkness of the wharfboat, however, they lost their bearings and emerged from the cargo box at the stern, where Marshall stumbled overboard. The alarm was given at once, and the crew of the Keystone State and that of the packet H. K. Bedford, which was lying at the bank below the wharfboat, made every possible effort to save the mah, but the last seen or heard of him was when he fell into the water. After that there was no outery.

Relatives of the drowned man will be here this morning from Pittsburgh, when an effort will be made to recover the body, but owing to the rather high stage of the river and the rise which will set in this morning it is feared the body will never be recovered. In an overcoat pocket which was found the will of his wife, in which she leaves to her husband all her property.

Mr. Marshall was about 40 years old. He had met with a series of reverses lately. Several weeks ago his store was closed by the sheriff. It is said that his fallure was caused by neglect of his business. His father, who resided with him on Florence avenue, went to his relief and arranged with Marshall's creditors on a basis that enabled him to reopen the store. A man who was in the employ of Marshall at one time started an opposition store in the same building and it is said that this worried him and that he had left home and had been wandering about for some time, having been at his store only a few times since it was reopened.

it was reopened.

About a year ago Marshall's wife died.

Some months ago Marshall also buried a child, and the loss of his loved ones caused him to be melancholy. His wife owned the property in which they resided, and she willed it to Marshall's children. He is survived by one child, a girl eight or ten years old.

AMUSEMENTS.

There never was a more successful farce comedy than Donnelly & Girard'a "Natural Gas." Mr. Edward Girard is presenting this hilarious play this season with a cast such as the piece has never had, in fact, as near as possible an all-star company. Mr. Girard is appearing in his original role of Whirlem O'Rourke, while Mr. Donnelly's part is played by Steve Jennings, who, for the past five seasons, was principal comedian with Hoyt & McKee. "Natural Gast comes to the Opera House next Saturday, January 28, matinee and

"VANITY FAIR."

Bright and catchy music, talented as well as pretty girls, exceedingly clever comedians and agile athletes and jugglers, with a well balanced chorus of carefully trained volces, all backed up by most appropriate scenic surroundings and resplendent in beautiful costuming, "Vanity Fair" comes to the Grand Thursday, Friday and Saturday, January 26, 27 and 28. The curtain raiser entitled. "A Winter Carnival," will offer plenty of opportunity for entertaining music, and frisky funsters will have their innings. Many pleasing innovations will be introduced and not the least is Pauline Mayhew, in an exhibition of fancy bag punching. The cilo is made up of clever artists, among whom are the vivacious Darling Sisters in a bright singing specialty; Topack & Steel, eccentric comedians, in songs and wittleisms; Ruth Ward, the laughing songstress; the great Sparrow in comedy juggling; Morrissy & Rich, a team of entertainers who have no equals; of entertainers who have no equals:
Pauline Mayhew in a turn of coon melodles, and, as a fitting finish to the ollo, ness the very satisfactory presentation of the New England drama, "A Country Merchant," in which the well known delineator of Yankee comedy, Mr. Charles Cowles, appears, supported by a very good company. The sechery is really first class, especially that in the second act, showing the postoffice and store at Mantua Corners. It is the real old country store, which few city people have not seen and wondered at. Among the several good specialities is a whistling solo, by Mr. Van Patton, which was really excellent. The engagement of this fine attraction closes to-day, with mattinee and night performances.
